SAFEGUARDING CHILDREN AND ADDRESSING ABUSE:

The Archdiocese Has Long Recognized the Pain of Child Sexual Abuse

Since his arrival in 2001 and his participation in the drafting of the Charter for the Protection of Children and Young People, Archbishop Myers has on many occasions either individually or with bishops in the United States, with the Holy Father, and with clergy throughout the world, acknowledged publicly the pain that sexual offenders inside the Church have inflicted on the innocent. At Christ Mass before the entire presbyterate and parish representatives of the Archdiocese, in media interviews, in statements issued by the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops, and in essays and columns, Archbishop Myers has stated that "a Church which spends the largest portion of its resources and the largest portion of its personnel in serving children, can never, and will never, condone anything which harms those children...We also extend our apology and our assurance of support and help to those who have been harmed and who are seeking healing and support." Beyond words, however, are actions. Assistance to victims, training and background checks of staff and volunteers, reporting accusations to civil authorities, removing clergy with substantiated accusations — these are clear indications that the Archbishop and the Archdiocese abhor child abuse. What's more, 20 years ago, the Archdiocese was one of the first dioceses in the country to establish a formal Review Board of experts with legal, law enforcement, clinical and investigative background to examine allegations of abuse and recommend to the Archbishop action under Church law.

Archdiocese of Newark
Office of Vocations

Remarks from Cardinal-designate Joseph W. Tobin on his appointment as the Archbishop of Newark, N.J.

Good morning. Thank you for coming to this press conference, which marks another stage in the long history of the Archdiocese of Newark. Two weeks ago, I learned that Pope Francis was entrusting to me the pastoral care of this storied archdiocese. Two weeks earlier I discovered that the Holy Father had named me to the College of Cardinals. I am not sure my central nervous system can take much more news. You will forgive the occasional stutter or facial twitch.

The news of my appointment to the Archdiocese of Newark evoked both shock and sadness. I recently marked four years as the Archbishop of Indianapolis and had come to love deeply the people of central and southern Indiana. It is gut-wrenching to think of leaving the wonderful clergy, religious and faithful of that local Church, as well as the many friends I have among people of other faiths and those of no faith.

On the other hand, I have understood that God has called me to live my baptism as a missionary disciple: one who is called by Jesus to be with Him and to be sent forth to preach and to heal. This vocation has led me to minister in parishes in Detroit and Chicago, lead the world-wide family of Redemptorist missionaries, serve Pope Benedict XVI in the Roman Curia and, most recently, to oversee the steady growth of the Church in Indiana. Now, I accept this assignment to Newark and understand it as God's will for me. God's grace has sustained me so far and I trust I will have what I need to serve well the People of God in this great Archdiocese.

When I arrived in Indianapolis four years ago, I had to fend off daily the dreaded "V question". People would ask me, "What is your vision for the Archdiocese?" "Don't have one," I would answer – which evoked a look of wonderment. I explained, "I don't have a vision right now but, with the help of the Holy Spirit, we will have one. Today it is not my intention to offer a plan or to devise a strategy; that would be arrogant and stupid. Instead, I would like to share some convictions about the vision. These principles will guide my ministry as I discern with the people of this archdiocese the way forward.

Three convictions about the vision

Jesus

The way forward is always and must be a response. We respond in love to God who loved us first. God has always been out in front of humanity as Creator, Redeemer and life-giving Spirit. The clearest sign of this is Jesus, sent to us because God "so loved the world". So, the criterion by which I want to be judged is whether, by word and actions, I led people to a deeper love for Jesus, who is the merciful face of God. My first conviction is that I am called to watch over the unity of this Archdiocese and to encourage in charity the journey of all toward an ever-greater knowledge, faith and love of Christ.

Field hospital

My second conviction is that the love of Christ is made manifest through His Body, the Church. Pope Francis has helped Roman Catholics understand how that Body ought to be understood today. He uses the graphic image of a "field hospital," dedicated to healing the wounds of human hearts. In describing the mission of the Church, the Holy Father outlined the tasks of the Archdiocese of Newark: to heal the wounded hearts, to open doors, to free [people], to say that God is good, God forgives all, that God is our Father, God is tender, that God is always waiting for us...

Continuing the double miracle of Pentecost

Thirdly, I believe that the Church in every age is challenged to reproduce the double miracle that accompanied her birth. The first miracle is dramatic: on the day of Pentecost, people from many lands heard the Good News proclaimed by the apostles, each in his or her own language. This miracle produced an abundant response of faith.

The second miracle is understated but nonetheless wonderfully real. There is no evidence that the response of faith erased the richness of culture. The Parthians, Medes, Elamites and all those other tongue-twisting nationalities did not "melt" into some celestial "pot". The first Christians retained the richness of their cultures while discovering a principle of unity. This principle is nothing less than the Holy Spirit.

I grew up in a multi-cultural neighborhood of southwest Detroit. I was a little jealous of classmates that went home and spoke a different language, ate different food, thought differently. My service of the Church obliged me to live many years in cultures different from the Irish-American ambient of my family. So I am excited to lead an archdiocese where the Eucharist is celebrated each Sunday in twenty languages. The Holy Spirit will help us prolong the double miracle of Pentecost.

The Spirit in which we need to work

Besides those three convictions, I would like to mention three qualities that I believe the Archdiocese will need and which I intend to promote.

The first is joy. I am not talking about a sort of superficial giddiness but rather the "joy which we experience daily, amid the little things of life, as a response to the loving invitation of God our Father," the joy that was promised us by Jesus, joy that is a fruit of the Holy Spirit.

The second is transparency. I intend to be in regular and effective communication with the people of this Archdiocese, city and state. I will promote policies that recognize that we preach the Gospel, not only with words but with actions.

The third quality is freedom. While believing people today have a justifiable interest in the cherished freedom of religion that is a part of our nation's heritage, I am even more concerned that the Catholics strive to be free from fear. As we grow in love of God and our neighbor, that love will drive out fear (1 John 4:18).

Gratitude

But the most precious quality any of us can manifest to a skeptical, cynical world is gratitude. Gratitude accepts life itself and everything that comes with it, even times of suffering and sorrow, as a gift. I am grateful:

- to the power of the Gospel which has brought about remarkable growth of Christ's Church in this Archdiocese and enabled its generous contribution, past and present, to American society and to the world;
- to Pope Francis, for his leadership of the Church and the example of his life, which teaches me how to be a bishop;
- to Archbishop John Joseph Myers, the fifth Archbishop of Newark, for the fifteen years he has spent laboring for the good of the Church. I am very grateful for his welcome to me.
- To my beloved Archdiocese of Indianapolis, her clergy, religious and faithful: in thanksgiving for all we have been able to do together, for the love and respect we share, for the unity that we will continue to enjoy in the communion of saints and the breaking of the bread.

Hope for the future

I never close a talk by saying "in conclusion", since someone once defined "second wind" as what happens after a bishop says "in conclusion." I would leave you with one last conviction: that hope is a characteristically Christian virtue, really, a sine qua non for disciples of Jesus. One of the first disciples, the apostle Peter, admonishes us to "always be ready to give an explanation to anyone who asks you for a reason for your hope." (1 Peter 3, 14).

I would like to offer you one reason for my hope, using the words of the American Catholic writer, Walker Percy, to help me. In his essay, "A Cranky Novelist Reflects on the Church" he offered a clear-eyed description of the challenges faced by the Church and her ministers. But in these very challenges, Percy pointed out a startling simple reason for hope:

Never has there been a more fertile harvest for the seed and the harvest the Lord spoke of. All that is needed is a bearer of the Good News who speaks of it with such authenticity that it can penetrate the most exhausted hearing, revive the most jaded language.

I invite the bishops, priests, deacons, religious and faithful of the Archdiocese of Newark to pray for me, that, in my service to you, I might speak of the Good News with such authenticity that you may recognize in my words, the voice of the Good Shepherd.

Thank you for your attention. I will be happy to answer any questions you might have.

Who is Cardinal-designate Joseph

Archbishop Joseph William Tobin, C.Ss.R., was born in Detroit, Michigan on 3 May 1952. He entered the Congregation of the Most Holy Redeemer (Redemptorists), and made temporary vows on 5 August 1972. On 21 August 1976 he made his solemn profession. In 1975 he obtained the Baccalaureate in Philosophy from Holy Redeemer College in Waterford, Wisconsin; in 1977 he obtained the degree of Master of Religious Education and in 1979 Master of Divinity (Pastoral Theology) at Mount Saint Alphonsus Major Seminary in Esopus, New York. Tobin was ordained to the priesthood on 1 June 1978.

Following his ordination, Tobin undertook the following assignments: Parochial Vicar (1979-1984), and later Pastor (1984-1990) of Holy Redeemer Parish in Detroit; Episcopal Vicar in the Archdiocese of Detroit (1980-1986); Pastor of Saint Alphonsus Parish in Chicago (1990-1991).

A pastor with the spirit of willing obedience

The Redemptorists Perspective.

Last Monday at the end of our working day, our Superior General Fr. Michael Brehl informed us that at noon today the Vatican announced that Archbishop Joseph Tobin had been transferred from the See of Indianapolis to the See of Newark, New Jersey. He asked us to pray for Archbishop Tobin in a special way.

I recall clearly when the Archbishop was first moved from his position as Secretary of the Congregation for Institutes of Consecrated Life and Apostolic Life, he was interviewed on television and asked if he felt happy to be returning 'home' to USA. He gave a very spiritual response. He said "I did not ask to leave Rome. I did not ask to move. I go willingly at the service of the Holy Father who has appointed me to Indianapolis".

In this I believe the Archbishop was saying that he felt missioned, sent, to be a pastor in this diocese. And indeed in the years he has served, his pastoral ministry has proved to be immensely fruitful and he has won the affection of all in the Archdiocese.

When he was named Cardinal a few weeks ago, he gave a press conference and again said very clearly "I love this Archdiocese and hope to continue my ministry here". However he added, "If the Holy Father decides to transfer me elsewhere, I will accept it in a spirit of willing obedience". And so it has come about.

At the press conference it was fairly obvious that the Archbishop had won the hearts of the priests, Religious and laity in the Archdiocese, and whilst our first thoughts and prayers go to the Archbishop,

I am also very conscious of the sense of loss for the people of Indianapolis.

They welcomed the Archbishop into their midst and made him feel at home. They took him to the hearts. Our thoughts must be with them in these difficult days in which he has been asked to leave them and serve elsewhere.

Of course our prayers and best wishes also go to the people of the Archdiocese of Newark. However the Redemptorists assure them that they are receiving a great gift from God and from Pope Francis of a good pastor to accompany them in the years that lie ahead.

Archbishop Tobin often said among his happiest years were when he was a pastor in Detroit; and indeed it is this pastoral spirit which has been most manifest in his priestly ministry over the years. As Redemptorists we continue to pray for him and support him, and wish him well in the new role to which Pope Francis has appointed him.

William Tobin, CRR?

In 1991 he was elected Consultor General of the Redemptorist Fathers, and on 9 September 1997 Superior General. He was re-elected to that position on 26 September 2003. In the same year he became Vice-president of the Union of Superiors General.

In addition, Tobin has served as a Member of the Council for Relations between the Congregation for Institutes of Consecrated Life and Societies of Apostolic Life and the International Unions of Superiors General (2001-2009).

He was named Secretary of the Congregation for Institutes of Consecrated Life and Societies of Apostolic Life on 2 August 2010, and at the same time elevated to the titular see of Obba, with the dignity of Archbishop. The following 9 October, he received episcopal consecration. He was named residential Archbishop of Indianapolis, Indiana, on 18 October 2012, and was installed the following 3 December. Within the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops, he has served Chairman of the Committee on Clergy, Consecrated Life and Vocations, and as Chairman of the Committee on Evangelization on Catechesis. He is also the President of the Subcommittee on the Catechism.

On 9 October 2016 it was announced that Archbishop Tobin will be made a Cardinal in the upcoming consistory.
