Reading Recommendations

Beatitudes for the Workplace, Max Oliva, SJ

People in the workplace are asking some difficult questions about how to find meaning in their work, how to find God in daily life, and how to bring the light of faith to ethical issues. Using the Beatitudes of Jesus as a framework, Oliva explores eight virtues: wisdom, integrity, honesty, compassion, justice for the earth, forgiveness, generosity, and courage.

OFFICE OF DIVINE WORSHIP

Contagions Guidelines for the Liturgy

An important element of containing germs and disease, both during and outside the liturgy, involves common sense. There is no need to severely limit liturgical practice due to the fear of contagions. Some things to keep in mind:

- Whether you are a priest, minister of the Mass or member of the assembly, wash hands before and after Mass. Make liberal use of hand sanitizers.
- If you are not feeling well, refrain from receiving the Blood of Christ and avoid physical contact with others.
- It is not obligatory to touch during the sign of peace; a reverent bow, for example, could suffice.
- Persons who feel that they may be contagious can legitimately excuse themselves from the obligation to attend Mass.
- Priests who are ill and must celebrate Mass might consider a separate chalice for their own use.
- Parents should determine the level of participation in the liturgy of their children, especially if they are sick.
- Germs spread more easily in warm, moist environments. Even in winter Church buildings should be kept cool and dry. Public buildings and bathrooms should be cleaned regularly.

- Ultimately, each individual needs to determine their level of liturgical involvement in sensitive situations.
- The ill who are homebound long-term should consider calling the parish for Communion for the sick.

You Are the Eyes of this Bulletin

Every week this bulletin brings you news about the life of the parish, the church and the Catholic world. All it is missing is your photos.

Over the past several months the staff of St Ann has worked diligently to improve the quality of this bulletin. We believe that a pleasant-looking weekly newsletter not only proves more effective in delivering relevant information about the parish, it also contributes to a deeper spiritual engagement from parishioners. The bulletin also gathers news from Catholic life beyond the borders of the parish in an effort to anchor our local life in our universal Church and raise parishioner awareness on important aspects of what it means to be Catholic. At this point the one thing we feel is missing is more photos to illustrate the life of the parish, so we are calling YOU out to take photos of parish events — fundraisers, meetings, committees, volunteers and ministries — and send them to us so we could include them in the bulletin. Take photos using your cell phone and email them to parishoffice@stannesjc.org When you send the photo from an iPhone, make sure to select "Full Size" for better quality:

R U texting in Church? Put the Phone Down!

By Angela CAVE
Catholic News Service

Entire families navigate their smartphones while sharing meals at restaurants. Students text in class. Parents take phone calls at their children's sporting events and plays. It's no surprise that cellphones affect even church.

It has become common for parishes to place blurbs in their bulletins about silencing cellphones and for lectors to make announcements about it before liturgies, reminding parishioners they're in a place of worship.

In some places, Massgoers heed the notices – with a few exceptions for people who work in emergency fields or don't understand how to silence their phones. At other parishes, ringtones, texting or even taking calls during liturgies can distract the presider and the people in the pews.

Dorothy Sokol, parish life director at Our Lady of Grace Parish in Ballston Lake, notices phones ringing and worshippers texting at Mass, despite signs in two different places and announcements cautioning against it. She said some people don't know they're offending people, but she's distracted by it, especially when parents let toddlers play electronic games on their phones.

Some parishioners use a tablet or smartphone to follow along with the readings for Mass, and "there's a place" for that, she said. As for texting, "people have to be conscious that they're in church to pray with a community and to try, if possible, to put the distractions away," Sokol told The Evangelist, Albany's diocesan newspaper. She's not sure how to handle teenagers she's seen texting repeatedly.

"What do you say?" she wondered. "Do you give the teenager grief when the parents are sitting right next to them and not saying anything? The last thing I want is for them to stop coming. You have to figure out what's best. Unfortunately, asking, 'What would Jesus do?' isn't a good question" – the Son of God never had a cellphone.

Father Richard Carlino, pastor of St. John the Evangelist and St. Anthony parishes in Schenectady, calls himself a "strong endorser of silencing the cellphones." People cooperate for the most part, but some don't hear the announcements at the start of each Mass.

"It throws my whole concentration off" when a phone rings during Mass, Father Carlino said. But "I don't think they do it maliciously."

In recent months, he's also had to talk to parishioners about texting—which he considers less distracting than a ringing phone, but "still a distraction from what they're supposed to be doing in church. Their mind is not on the Lord. There are exceptions, but the exceptions should be few." On the other hand, "I'm happy they're there, even if they're doing stuff they shouldn't be."

Father Thomas Holmes, pastor of St. Henry Parish in Averill Park and St. Mary Parish in Nassau, gets so frustrated by poor technology etiquette at Mass that he joked about installing an electric dog fence around the churches—or at least a signal scrambler.

"Almost every weekend, somebody's cellphone goes off during Mass, oftentimes during the consecration," he said. "I often laugh, and it's a sarcastic laugh. I've said a couple of times, 'You've got to be kidding me.' I think they should be embarrassed." There's a sign on the door of St. Henry's asking those who enter to turn their phones off. Father Holmes was puzzled and disappointed when he noticed someone had crossed out the words. "It's disheartening," he said. "There's no reason for anybody to have their cellphone on in church."

He has spotted teenagers and young adults texting at Mass, but hasn't confronted anyone. Texting only distracts him if he notices it, but he still wishes it didn't happen at all in church.

"I've watched people walk into telephone poles while they're texting, so it doesn't surprise me" that it's hard to turn off the technology, he said. "People are attached. I've had parents tell me that their kids text each other while they're sitting next to each other on the couch. "Overall, I think people should have a little more sense when it comes to their cell phones. They forget why they're (at church). It's only an hour of their life."

Andrea Freeman, office manager at St. Matthew's in Voorheesville, saw someone texting at a wake, but said otherwise it doesn't happen there often.

At Christ Our Light Parish in Loudonville, phones generally aren't a problem, though a ringer did interrupt Deacon Dick Thiesen, the parish life director, once as he proclaimed the Gospel. He's also seen parents texting during their children's confirmations.

Special Altar Cloth For November

On All Souls Day, November 2003, a very special cloth was laid on the altar. Over the last one hundred years, many gifts have been shared with our Parish in remembrance of loved ones who have died.

Quite often, vestments to be used at Mass are given. Some of these memorials are sent around the world so that priests who cannot afford quality vestments may come before the altar properly attired. The generosity of the Saint Anne's family over the years has touched many other parishes and churches. But, with so many years and such generous people, we still had vestments that, due to age, could no longer be used.

A very talented seamstress, Jane Cecere, took these vestments and created a special altar cloth, which recalls all the souls of our faithful departed. Twenty-three vestments were used to create the 40 squares of the All Souls Quilted Altar Cloth. We will continue to use this altar cloth during each All Souls Novena, as we remember the parishioners of the past, with the prayers of the parishioners of the present.

Safeguarding Children and Addressing Abuse

The Archdiocese Has Long Recognized the Pain of Child Sexual Abuse

Since his arrival in 2001 and his participation in the drafting of the Charter for the Protection of Children and Young People, Archbishop Myers has on many occasions either individually or with bishops in the United States, with the Holy Father, and with clergy throughout the world, acknowledged publicly the pain that sexual offenders inside the Church have inflicted on the innocent. At Chrism Masses before the entire presbyterate and parish representatives of the Archdiocese, in media interviews, in statements issued by the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops, and in essays and columns, Archbishop Myers has stated that "a Church which spends the largest portion of its resources and the largest portion of its personnel in serving children, can never, and will never, condone anything which harms those children...We also extend our apology and our assurance of support and help to those who have been harmed and who are seeking healing and support."

Beyond words, however, are actions. Assistance to victims, training and background checks of staff and volunteers, reporting accusations to civil authorities, removing clergy with substantiated accusations – these are clear indications that the Archbishop and the Archdiocese abhor child abuse. What's more, 20 years ago, the Archdiocese was one of the first dioceses in the country to establish a formal Review Board of experts with legal, law enforcement, clinical and investigative background to examine allegations of abuse and recommend to the Archbishop action under Church law.
