Safeguarding Children and Addressing Abuse

The Catholic Church Is Battling Sexual Abuse

While most media focus over the past ten or more years has been on the incidents of sexual abuse within the Church, little has been said about the many positive steps that the Catholic Church has taken to address the issue. Dioceses across the country, and especially the Archdiocese of Newark, have instituted compassionate outreach to victims and support services, training and background checks for staff and volunteers, training for children and youth, codes of conduct, reporting requirements to civil authorities, independent Review Boards to investigate allegations and recommend actions under Canon law for offenders, as well as other initiatives.

To date, the Catholic Church is the only youth-serving organization in the country – private or public -- to undertake such a comprehensive program to create and promulgate safe environments for children and young people.

Independent auditors from the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops have found the Archdiocese of Newark to be fully compliant with the requirements of the Charter for the Protection of Children and Young People in every year since audits began in 2003.

Meet The New Priests of the Archdiocese of Newark

Father Nelson Yobani Oyola Garcia

Fr. Oyola came to the U.S. in 2004 from Colombia, where he was born 32 years ago in Villahermosa Tolima. "I always wanted to be a priest," he said, crediting the Daughters of Charity and the parish priests in his hometown with nurturing his vocation.

"The generosity and love the priests and consecrated religious had for the people gave me a deep desire to want to serve the Lord," he said. "I recall with great love and appreciation my family's support and love, which helped my vocation to grow in my heart." The son of Luis and Maria, he is the youngest of three brothers.
